

Spotlight On

---

Master Sergeant Kenneth Madison, USAF

By: JO1(SW) Bev Allen, U.S. Northern Command Public Affairs

Posted Jan 06, 2003 at 2:16:PM

MST

Pensacola, Fla. native, Air Force Chief MSgt. Kenneth Madison, is the Chief of the Command Group for the North American Aerospace Defense Command and the United States Northern Command. Madison was heavily involved with the transition of U.S. Space Command to U.S. Strategic Command and the activation of U.S. Northern Command. As the chief of the command group, "I am responsible for command section information management and visual information. Our office facilitates the flow of information to and from the commands directorates. The fine people with whom I have the pleasure to work with are the hub for all command taskers and staff actions. They expertly manage the command s conference rooms and graphics capability. I love what I do and really enjoy the opportunity this job gives me to work with such great people," Madison said. Madison s role model is his father. "He taught me everything I know. He taught me the importance of family, to work hard, how to treat others, and always reminded me that I could do, or be, anything I wanted."

Air Force Chief Master Sergeant Ken Madison
Photo credit: JO1(SW) Bev Allen